Big Brown Eyes Looking Up!

Roxanne Quezada Chartouni was born in El Salvador and at the tender age of 4 weeks her family moved to San Francisco, California. As a teenager, her family would go on trips to El Salvador where she began documenting her experiences. These genuine “LIFE” experiences inspired her to pursue photography.

Roxanne is one of the few Hispanic Women Photographers in the field. Working with cutting-edge artists in Los Angeles during the early 80’s; it was only a matter of time before these influences helped her bloom as an ARTIST. She has exhibited her work in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and recently in Cleveland. Her camera has captured the faces of Antwone Fisher, Spike Lee, Russell Simmons, Jim Brown, President George W. Bush and many more.

In 2002 she established her own company, Big Brown Eyes Productions, Ltd. and freelances for the Greater Cleveland Media Development Corporation, Associated Press, H2N Design Inc., as well as other local companies in Ohio.

Roxanne was recently featured in the Cleveland Plain Dealer and reviewed in Cleveland’s Scene Magazine. Her work continues to create a buzz. “I will say this, that no matter what kind of obstacles might park themselves in front of your caminito, you just have to find a way around it. And no matter how many times I was told I couldn’t do it; the harder I tried to prove them wrong.” Roxanne said.

You will definitely be hearing more about Big Brown Eyes Productions in the future. Roxanne does anything from photo shoots for models to conferences to conventions.
