

Mija Message

Hola Mijas! These past two months have been quite educational for me. Some good lessons, some bad.

Let's walk back to October when Teresa Heinz-Kerry came to my hometown, Lorain, Ohio. She came to discuss John Kerry's Health Plan for America. This was by invitation only, so I was honored to even be invited. I went to this event sitting in the crowd and ended up on stage posing as a background, which was no problem.

After an hour of watching the back of her head, I came to one conclusion... she has some good hair! After the program was finished, she started to take pictures with everyone on stage and I was about 2 feet away from her....2 FEET! I could've taken her purse and took all the ketchup packets in it! Pero, when picture time came guess what the CEO of Mija Magazine didn't have? Yep you guessed it....a freaking camera. ☹ Boy o boy did I kick myself in the butt for that one. That was my failed test and now you can learn from my mistake. This is what the Mija Message is about...I learn from you and you learn from me.

Moving along. I was looking at all the files on my computer saying to myself, "How are you going to pull the December/January issue off? There's so much to remember." What did I do you ask? I turned off my computer and watched Oprah. Luckily for me it was one of her "Wildest Dreams" shows and I love those.

Anywhoo, in that episode she blessed a hard working Italian man with a walk in role on Will and Grace, and she bought a house for a hardworking lady that took in her brother's 6 kids because he had a drug problem. Mijas let me tell you it takes a whole lot for me to cry, but every time she does these shows I start balling. I don't want to be like Oprah, I just want the ability to BLESS like her.

After the show, I turned my computer back on and started working on what you are reading today. It's funny how someone you do not know can inspire you to an unexplainable degree. So in closing, don't thank me on this one, thank Oprah!
